Who, within your Company, is interested in Using Audioconferencing Tools and what are the benefits ?

ClearOne.

Who may be interested in audioconferencing ?

Most Departments (HR, Finance, IT, Operations, Sales, investors, marketing,..) and every stakeholder in today Companies are looking for ways to:

- Streamline communications
- Reduce costs
- Increase productivity

What are the benefits you get back ?

Most conferencing solutions can reduce a company's meeting costs using Interactive Tools such as :

1 - Audioconferencing :

Holding Weekly Audio Conferences with company department heads ensures everyone is on the same page with the message.

2 - Webconferencing :

Holding monthly electronic meetings using Web Conferencing with Segment Managers and prepare reports real-time. Display results over a Web Conference so participants can view graphs, while interacting in audio.

3 - Videoconferencing :

Holding a series of strategy sessions via Video Conferencing. Add continuous presence to view multiple sites simultaneously.

- Many companies are feeling the pressure of rising airfares and are under more pressure to reduce travel costs and to engage in Sustainable Development, thus reducing Carbone Footprint on a daily basis : "The Finance Director will normally be the "travel containment champion", looking for ways to combat rising airfares ..."
- In terms of company communications, HR is often the only department to interface across all departments gaining visibility to a multitude of communication improvement opportunities.
- One of the challenges Sales Directors face, is finding effective communication tools to help keep their sales teams up to speed on product updates, competitive news, and sales strategies. With a single conference call, Sales Director can communicate important messages to multiple audiences.
